

Weekly Digest

Out for Summer!

August 10, 2020

Check this Out!

"Sick of quarantine? Now you can scream into the mountains of Iceland from your home." Check out this article from Fast Company for more info about this entertaining concept and excellently executed site and technical set up.

Explore the iridescent creatures of the night sea from the comfort of your home, with these captivating photos from National Geographic. The cowfish is particularly cute.

Ever struggled to remember things? A USA Memory Champion and a psychological scientist discuss ways to trick your brain into remembering.

Culture

during COVID

David Zinn, a chalk artist, creates amazing illusions and fascinating street art that captures imaginations and whisks passersby off to whimsical thoughts. Watch this video of him in action.

Yinka Ilori brings joyful color to public spaces, drawing on his memories of family & his culture. Watch this video of him and his work

Taking Care....

Do you find social media creating stress in your life? You're not alone. Many people find that interacting over social media has the potential to create stress and conflict. This short video from Greater Good Science Center talks about a quick little exercise that can help you manage that stress. Check it out!

Logical Fallacy of the Week

Appeal to the Bandwagon
Polls reveal that all the cool kids love Ms. J's brownies. There's absolutely no way you won't like them.

This fallacy "uses the fact that a sizable number of people, or perhaps even a majority, believe in something as evidence that it must therefore be true."

Where else have you seen this fallacy?

An Illustrated Book of Bad Arguments, Ali Almosawi, p40, bookofbadarguments.com

www.49ersSLI.com

49ERS STEM
LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE

